SUE HARRIS TRUST
If someone has a blood cancer, such as leukaemia, the only chance of saving their life could be a stem cell transplant. But those stem cells must come from someone with a matching tissue type, which, if you are Jewish, is more likely to be from someone who is also Jewish. Every year, there are over 1,000 Jewish people around the world who need an unrelated stem cell donor to save their life. It takes literally a few minutes to get swabbed and you could become a potential lifesaver.
