

Positive Boundaries follow on support

Positive Boundaries (previously called TeenBoundaries) works to prevent sexual bullying, peer on peer sexual exploitation and promotes positive gender relationships. Work on the issues that we address is best if it is ongoing, consistent and sensitive to the fact that these matters are inescapable for young people.

We have devised follow-up workshops and services for schools that contain guidance and suggestions for teachers about running further sessions, with lesson-plans and materials that encourage discussions to deepen the understanding and confidence Positive Boundaries generates. These also support “staff and pupils to deal effectively with instances of bullying”.

“Many thanks for your workshop today. The girls really enjoyed it and got a lot out of it. The balance of activities was just right.”

Mrs Shrimpton, Watford Girls School

Workshop title	Aim
A Whole School Approach:	To enable professionals to implement a Whole School Approach to Gender Equality in their school.
Tackling sexting in youth settings:	To enable professionals to effectively engage in important discussions about sexting. (Participants will also be provided with a ‘tool kit’, for raising this topic with young people).
Tackling pornography within youth settings:	To enable professionals to effectively engage in discussions about pornography, which enable the young people they work with to interpret the online world in a safe way.
